	Current	Pre-2023
Competition Format	Round robin pool Stage, followed by a knockout Stage	Round robin pool Stage, followed by a knockout Stage
Team Composition	teams of two men and two women	teams of two men and one woman
Playing Order	Woman #2, Man #1, Woman #1, Man #2 OR Man #2, Woman #1, Man #1, Woman #2 by coin toss	#1 Man, Women's, #2 Men's.
Match Scoring	All matches played best of 5 games to 7 points. At 6-6, the game still played to 7 points	All matches 5 games PAR scoring to 11 points.
Tie Scoring	Finishing positions in pools will be determined by total matches accrued across all ties in that pool, e.g. a 4-0 result scores 4 to the winner and 0 to the losing team; a tie (2-2) accrues 2 matches each. If two or more teams have equal total matches, finishing positions will be determined first by the head-to-head result between teams and if still equal by games differential and then points differential. If still equal, then by coin toss. At stage 2 (knock-out), in the event of a 2-2 draw, the winner will be determined by games differential and if still equal by points differential across the four matches in the tie. If still equal the result will be determined by the head-to-head result of the first match played in the tie.	The final order decided, - first by greater number of ties won - if 2 teams still equal, then the result between the teams - if 3 or more teams have won the same number of ties, then by the greater number of matches won - if 2 teams still equal, then by result between the 2 teams - if 3 or more teams still equal, then by greater positive difference between games won and lost - if 2 teams still equal, then by result between the 2 teams - if 3 or more teams still equal, then by greater positive difference between points won and lost - if 2 teams still equal, then by result between the 2 teams - if more than two teams still equal, then by lottery.

The 24th Annual General Meeting of the World Squash Federation in Guernsey unanimously re-elected HRH Prince Imran (Malaysia) as President for a third term. The 3 Vice-Presidents of the Federation Susie Simcock (New Zealand), Bob Finch (Australia) and Philip van der Ven (Netherlands) were also returned for further 2 year terms.

The meeting voted to increase the maximum number of teams allowed to compete in World Championships from 24 to 32 and restructured the format to allow the top 16 teams to be seeded into potential winning positions. In future, specialist seeding committees will be utilised to place teams in the draw, overcoming the seeding problems which disrupted the Men's Championship in Karachi last year. Prince Imran said: "The dramatic growth of Squash in Africa and South America has placed enormous pressure on the WSF to admit more nations to our Team Championships. The welcome and overwhelming support for our motion to increase to 32 teams reflects the increased voting power of these newer Squash nations."

Two contested bids for future championships were decided when Egypt won the right to host the 1996 World Junior Men's event and Malaysia defeated the Netherlands in the ballot for the 1997 Men's World Open & World Team Championships.

The meeting reaffirmed that the Federation's most important objective is to gain entry to the Olympic programme and committed maximum efforts to the campaign to be present in Sydney in the year 2000.

1992 was a key year for South African squash. South Africa had voluntarily suspended its membership of the world body in the interest of unity of the Federation and to support squash's Olympic aspirations, but on 21 February 1992 a unified Squash South Africa was created. Three months later on 29 May the country was re-admitted to the ISRF (now WSF). Then, in August that year it sent a team to Hong Kong to participate in the men's World Juniors to end the hiatus. Here is that World Junior 1992 squad. Squash South AfricaWorld Squash Federation

Squash Library has been seeking out past World Masters results to add to www.squashinfo.com on behalf of WSF. Anybody wanting to see past results can do so generally from the last 16 round for each age group for every year. However, there are still some results missing so this is an appeal to send them to me: andrew@squashlibrary.info if you have them please. Specifically, for 1993 (Edinburgh) and 2006 (Cape Town), only the quarter finals onwards have been added, so last 16 round results would be welcomed. But the real priority is 1995 (Melbourne) where only the final results have been sourced. Any and all missing results welcomed, please.

There have been many Australian world squash champions, including legends such as Geoff Hunt, Heather McKay, Sarah Fitz-Gerald and Vicki Cardwell. The second men's World Open in 1977 was the first stand-alone event - the inaugural title the year before being added for the British Open winner. Originally scheduled to take place in Sydney, it was relocated to another Australian city – Adelaide. Played October 11 to 22 at the Brahma Lodge Squash Centre, Uniroyal sponsored the event with AS40,000 (£26,000) in prize money - the richest offered in the history of squash at that point. Last round here, full results at <https://www.squashinfo.com/events/1025-mens-world-open-1977>. This week, thirty years ago, over two and a half years after his last British Open win, Jahangir Khan returned after injury and seeming retirement to reach the 1993 World Open final. He lost to Jansher Khan, but the following day they joined up to spearhead Pakistan beating Australia in the final to win their sixth World Team title – on his home turf of Karachi. He then officially retired.

On this day in 1998 Sarah Fitz-Gerald staged a memorable squash comeback to beat fellow Australian Michelle Martin in the final of the Women's World Open in Stuttgart, Germany. Martin (a 3 times winner) was 8-2 up in the fifth, but having saved seven match points Fitz-Gerald took the match 10/9, to win the third of her five World Open titles.

The Men's World Open was first played in 1976, but an oddly titled 'A World Open Event' took place two years earlier at the Hunts Squash Courts in Melbourne. The application to use 'World Open' was turned down by the World Federation as they had their own plans to initiate it. The event was a 16 player invitation only, and the late request left some players e.g. Jonah Barrington, unable to attend. (On court world number one Geoff Hunt beat Cam Nancarrow (pic) in an all-Australian final, after they beat Pakistanis Hiddy Jahan and Gogi Alaudin respectively in the semi-finals). At the World Federation AGM in Helsinki in 1991, the ownership of the Men's World Open title was finally resolved after ten years in which PSA (then called ISPA) had managed it - when the ISRF (now WSF) ceding the title to ISPA was agreed by the AGM. The Library full set of WSF AGM minutes is at www.squashlibrary.info/wsf-agm-minutes. World Squash Federation Squash - PSA World Tour

AMENDED MOTION - OFFICERS

"That the ISRF recognises that ownership of the Men's World Open title is vested with the International Squash Players Association on the understanding that:

- i. The ISPA recognises and acknowledges the ISRF's sole and exclusive right to promote and organise World Squash Championships for individuals and teams at senior and junior level for both men and women.
- ii. That in years when the Men's World Open and Men's World Team Championships are to be held together, a combined application is made to both the ISPA and the ISRF by the Host Association, and
- iii. That the ISRF recognises the winner of the Men's World Open as World Champion in the absence of the ISRF not itself organising a World Individual Championship for Men."

- Roger Eady of ISPA confirmed that his Association understood and supported the motion by the Officers.

For juniors, each year either the male or female World Team Championships follow the individual events. After 2010 for individual events without a team championship the top 8 players play off to decide positions 1 to 8. But where there is a following team championship play-offs for 3 to 8 do not take place, to provide a rest day for almost all players.

The Men's World Team Championship began in 1967 (full history at <https://www.squashlibrary.info/world-championships>), and until 1976 the biennial event was only contested by most of the World Federation initial Members (Australia, Canada, Egypt, Great Britain, India, New Zealand, Pakistan, South Africa and USA).

The 1976 edition in England saw the first new entrants; Sweden from Europe and Kuwait from Asia. In 1979, in Australia, Nigeria debuted from Africa, while in 1987 back in England, Brazil became the first non-Founder entry from the PanAm region. The maximum number of national teams who have been able to play in a World Team Championship is 32, more entries meaning regional qualification is required. (Entries & results at <https://www.squashlibrary.info/world-championships>). The maximum has not been exceeded but The Men's has reached 32 on three occasions: 1995 – Cairo, Egypt, 1997 – Petaling Jaya, Malaysia and 2011 – Paderborn, Germany. (The first staging in Melbourne, Australia in 1967 featured six nations).

The Women's highest entry was 26 nations at the 2012 edition in Nimes, France; after also starting with six at the debut event in Birmingham, England in 1979.

P. NUMBERS OF TEAMS AND FORMATS

P1. A maximum of 32 MNFs will qualify to provide teams for a World Team Championship: 17 MNFs (including the Host) will qualify for places on the basis of their final placement in the preceding similar World Team Championship; the remaining 15 places will be allocated to the five WSF Regional Federations as follows:

Africa	2 places
Asia	4 Places
Europe	4 Places
Oceania	1 Place
Pan-America	4 Places

These places will be determined by each Regional Federation either by results from existing Regional Team Championships played between teams of players representing the competing MNFs (preferably three-person teams) or, where this is inappropriate, by separate play-offs within the Region. If any Region fails to take up its quota, the WSF Championships Commission will decide on substitute(s).

THE WOMEN WHO HAVE REACHED THE PINNACLE - SQUASH'S WORLD JUNIOR TEAM CHAMPIONS

Omneya Abdel Kawy is the only player to have played in four Junior Team Championships (1997, 99, 01 & 03). Her Egypt team won in 99 & 03 (pics below).

(The Library World Championship compendia are at <https://www.squashlibrary.info/world-championships>)

When she played her team first match on the first day of the 1997 Women's World Junior Championship at the AABB Club in Rio De Janeiro, Brazil, she was still nearly two weeks short of her 12th birthday! In her four World Junior Team events she only lost one of the 23 matches she played, that to formidable Malaysian Nicol David. Meanwhile, she was runner up in the accompanying World Junior Individual in 01 & her junior career culminated in winning the title in 2003.

When the Men's World Open was played for the second time at the Palais Des Sports in Toulouse, France on 6 – 11 November 1990, there were two showcourts used. And, interestingly, the two Puchaux courts had different colour floors – green and blue, as pictured.

The final was played on green, Pakistan's Jansher Khan beating Australian Chris Dittmar 15-8, 17-15, 13-15, 15-7 to take the third of his eight World Open titles.

The first Men's World Open was not played as a separate event - the World Federation agreed in 1975 that the winner of the 1976 British Open would be awarded the world title too. It was played at the Wembley Squash Centre in London, 31 Jan – 9 Feb 1976, and 2nd seed Australian Geoff Hunt beat 4th ranked Mohibullah Khan 7-9, 9-4, 8-10, 9-2, 9-2 in the final. The 130 minute match was the longest recorded at that point. Two other Pakistanis, Qamar Zaman & Gogi Alauddin were seeded 1 & 3 respectively. Hunt (pictured with the two trophies) went on to win the next three World Open titles too, beating Qamar Zaman in each final. When World Championships began the host nation chose which ball would be used. That ended after the Swedish hosts of the World Juniors in 1980 decided on the green 'general use' ball (1980 ad here), much to the shock of players & managers. Since then an 'adopted' World Championship Ball has been designated.

FULL MARKS

The Dunlop Black. The official SRA ball. Chosen for the World Open in Toronto, it's made its mark in more championships than any other ball in the world.

NO MARKS

The Dunlop Green. As close as you can get to championship standard, in a ball that so seldom makes its mark, you can use it on any court in the country.

You can't imagine squash without Dunlop.

Although World Squash Championships have been held in all the five global squash regions, the first held in mainland China was the WSF Women's World Team event in 2018. I was held 11 – 16 September in the city of Dalian.

It took place at the Xigang Stadium, home of a squash centre with four permanent all-glass courts made by the Chinese CGG court company.

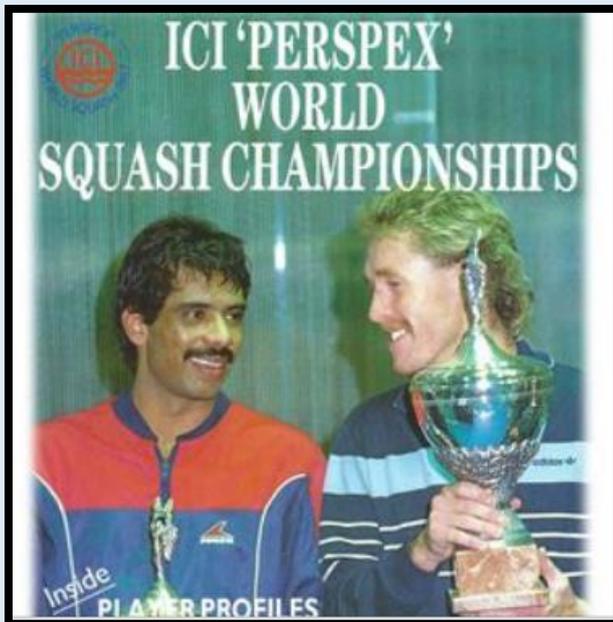

For the event a further two showcourts were erected in the sport hall – making it unique in using six glass showcourts for an event! World Squash Federation

The format of World Team Championships now mean that ordinarily a nation plays a maximum of seven ties. But go back to October 1987 where the entry for the Men's World Team Championship in England was eight more than the previous record, the format meant that 20 nations were given direct access into initial pools, joined by four qualifiers from the two preliminary pools of four teams. The winners went straight through but the second & third in the pools had a playoff tie.

After six team pools, the final stage was 1 – 8, 9 – 16 and 17 – 24 places. This meant that Norway, and Kuwait who succeeded in the preliminary pools after playoffs had played a total of 12 times. And only two players – Norway's Johan Abyholm (left) and Kuwaiti Tariq Al-Oweish, featured in all 12. For the record, Abyholm won 8, while Al-Oweish won 2.

11 November 1986 was a squash milestone – being the date when Ross Norman ended Jahangir Khan’s 5year 7month unbeaten spell in the final of the World Open at the Palais Des Sports in Toulouse, France.

But three years earlier was a significant time too. The summer of 1983 was when the New Zealander wrecked his knee landing awkwardly on the edge of the runway at the end of his first ever parachute jump. He reported it as ‘it felt like falling out of a two-storey building’. Having severed one ligament and displaced another it seemed unlikely that he would play again. He did, and the rest, as they say, is history!

The first Men's World Open took place in 1976, not separately but as a joint title with the British Open – as a month before the start the sponsorship had not been found to fund the prize money. At that point a chance meeting between Jonah Barrington and an executive from British automotive company Lucas Industries led to a last-minute rescue enabling Australian Hunt to beat Pakistani Mohibullah Khan in the final 7/9, 9/4, 8/10, 9/2, 9/2 to win the first of his three World Opens (after previously winning three World Amateur crowns).

With Egypt seeded one and hot favourites to retain the WSF Men's World Team Championship this month their path towards dominance may be relatively short, but is clear.

It started with the Junior Men's in 1994 when Egypt won their first ever team title led by Ahmed Barada & Omar Elborolossy. (All are biennial and this one has been won six times).

Juniors moved up and after the first Men's won on home ground in 1999, four of these titles have been won in all – but with England proving to be a stumbling block with three of their own during this period.

The same pattern was followed on the female side with the juniors coming first. After a first title in 1999 the girls have eight in total including the last six.

The Egyptian Women's team took their first title in 2008 and have four titles in all.

The Land of The Pharaohs currently hold all four major World Team titles.
